

Early Journal Content on JSTOR, Free to Anyone in the World

This article is one of nearly 500,000 scholarly works digitized and made freely available to everyone in the world by JSTOR.

Known as the Early Journal Content, this set of works include research articles, news, letters, and other writings published in more than 200 of the oldest leading academic journals. The works date from the mid-seventeenth to the early twentieth centuries.

We encourage people to read and share the Early Journal Content openly and to tell others that this resource exists. People may post this content online or redistribute in any way for non-commercial purposes.

Read more about Early Journal Content at http://about.jstor.org/participate-jstor/individuals/early-journal-content.

JSTOR is a digital library of academic journals, books, and primary source objects. JSTOR helps people discover, use, and build upon a wide range of content through a powerful research and teaching platform, and preserves this content for future generations. JSTOR is part of ITHAKA, a not-for-profit organization that also includes Ithaka S+R and Portico. For more information about JSTOR, please contact support@jstor.org.

IN VACATION.

Mr. O'Connor once gave in his incisive way a useful hint to all lawyers: "Cross-examination is an amusement indulged in by the very young. It is like trying to pull the tiger out of his den. You may pull him out, or again he may pull you in."—West Virginia Bar.

Lord Ashbourne (Lord Chancellor of Ireland), when presiding at the dinner of the Law Students' Debating Society last month, told a couple of stories. He was emphasizing the necessity for a speaker knowing when it is time to sit down, and, as an illustration, said there was an American advocate who, in pleading his case, seemed likely to go on forever. At length he said perfunctorily, "I am afraid I am taking up a great deal of time." "Oh, never mind time," sighed the wearied judge, "but, for goodness' sake, don't trench upon eternity." The other story was of an Irish advocate who was defending a prisoner in a speech of interminable length. He had attained to an unenviable notoriety for his never-ending speeches, and was in the habit of saying to the court, "I am afraid I am very tedious." The judge, as a rule, politely evaded the remark, but on this occasion a different judge was upon the bench, who said, "Not very, not very." Good stories, we admit, but not new. Are there any new stories?—Law Notes (London).

JUDGES' VACATIONS.—The judges have not yet announced how they propose to spend their vacations, but if their names are to be taken as indicative of their tastes we imagine that they will be able to find some very pleasant pastimes Very good fishing could be had by the following judges: Fish of Georgia, Gill of Indian Territory, Hooker of Michigan, Pound of Nebraska, Pike of New Hampshire, and Fisher and Fly of Texas. Deep-water fishing could be conducted by Judge Kruse of the Supreme Court of New York, and Judge Seamon of the United States District Court, Eastern District of Wisconsin. Doubtless Judge Torrance of Connecticut will go to Niagara Falls, while Judge Lovely of Minnesota will pass away his time at Lake Minnetonka and make himself agreeable to the ladies. Cutting off coupons and occasional visits to Wall Street will furnish sufficient recreation for Judges Rich and Goodrich of the Supreme Court of New York. Among the gentlemen farmers will probably be numbered Judges Ricks of Illinois, Bean of Oregon, Corn of Wyoming, and Barnes of Nebraska. The Klondike will of course prove very interesting to Judge Miner of Utah. Judge Scripture of the Supreme Court of New York, will not be able to leave his Bible class; Judge Goff of the United States Circuit Court, Fourth Circuit, will spend his time on the links; Judge Hatch of the Supreme Court of New York will endeavor to perfect an incubator upon which he is working; Judge Wheeler of the United States District Court, District of Vermont, will hie away on his silent steed; and Judge Dunwell of the Supreme Court of New York will devote his spare time lecturing to law students on how to make collections. It may be reasonably expected that Judge Paynter of Kentucky will devote his leisure moments to art, and will number among his associates Judges White of Kentucky, Black of Indiana, Greene of Kansas, Grey of New Jersey, and Brown of By far the greatest number of judges, however, will find camp life most congenial to them and will endeavor to do some hunting out of season. Judge Chase of New Hampshire, Hunter of Texas, Fowler of Maryland, and Speer of the United States District Court, Southern District of Georgia, may be depended upon to supply the camp with game. Judge Fursman of the Supreme Court of New York will have his gun loaded for bear. The commissary should be in charge of the following judges: Grubb of Delaware, Bunn of Arkansas, Baker of Indiana, and Cook of North Carolina. Judges Chipman of California, Fell of Pennsylvania, and Whittle of Virginia will be amply able to keep the fires going, and after the day's hunting is over Judge Caldwell of Tennessee will "skin down his hand" and act with circumspection becoming his name and will keep the weather eye on Judge Sharpe of Alabama. Judge Wiley of Indiana will keep out of the game. Judge Betts of the Supreme Court of New York will arbitrate all disputes in the good old-fashioned way. The transportation of this party will be in charge of Judge Carter of Florida, and if any foraging should be necessary it might well devolve upon Judge Steele of Colorado. The demands of these convivial spirits upon Justice Brewer will be so great that he will be unable to accompany them. - Law Notes.